Nor less think we in heav'n of thee on earth,
Than of our fellow-servant; and inquire Gladly into the ways of God with man. Milt. Parad. Lost.
Fair fellow-servant! may your gentle ear
Prove more propitious to my flighted care
Than the bright dame's we serve. Waller.
Their fathers and yours were fellow-servants to the same heavenly master while they lived; nor is that relation dissolved by their death, but ought still to operate among their surviving children. Atterbury's Sermons.
FELLOW-SOLDIER. n. f. One who fights under the same commander. An endearing appellation used by officers to their men.
Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation. Shakesp.
Epaphroditus, my brother and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier. Phil. ii. 25.
FELLOW-STUDENT. n. f. One who studies in company with another.
I pr'ythee, do not mock me, fellow-student;
I think it was to see my mother's wedding. Shakesp. Hamlet.
If you have no fellow-student at hand, tell it over with your acquaintance. Watts's Logick.
FELLOW-SUBJECT. n. f. One who lives under the same government.
The bleeding condition of their fellow-subjects was a feather in the balance with their private ends. Swift.
FELLOW-SUPPER. n. f. One who shares in the same evils;
one who partakes the same sufferings with another.
How happy was it for those poor creatures, that your grace was made their fellow-sufferer? And how glorious for you, that you chose to want rather than not relieve the wants of others?
Dryden's Fables, Dedication.
We in some measure share the necessities of the poor at the same time that we relieve them, and make ourselves not only their patrons but fellow-sufferers. Addison's Spectator.
FELLOW-WRITER. n. f. One who writes at the same time, or on the same subject.
Since they cannot raise themselves to the reputation of their fellow-writers, they must sink it to their own pitch, if they would keep themselves upon a level with them. Addison's Spectator.
FELLOWFEELING. n. f. [fellow and feelings.]
1. Sympathy.
It is a high degree of inhumanity not to have a fellowfeel- ing of the misfortune of my brother. L'Estrange.
2. Combination; joint interest.
Even your milkwoman and your nurserymaid have a fel- lowfeeling. Arbutnot's History of John Bull.
FELLOWLIKE. adj. [fellow and like.] Like a companion;
FELLOWLY. adv. on equal terms; companionable.
All which good parts he graceth with a good fellowlike, kind, and respectful carriage. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
One feed for another, to make an exchange.
With fellowly neighbourhood seemeth not strange. Tusser.
FELLOWSHIP. n. f. [from fellow.]
1. Companionship; comfort; society.
This boy cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship. Shak. Coriolan.
From blissful bow'rs
Of amarantine shade, fountain, or spring,
By the waters of life, where'er they sit
In fellowships of joy, the fons of light Hasted. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. xi. l. 80.
There is no man but God puts excellent things into his possession, to be used for the common good; for men are made for society and mutual fellowship. Calamy's Sermons.
God having designed man for a sociable creature, made him not only with an inclination and under the necessity to have fellowship with those of his own kind, but furnished him also with language, which was to be the great instrument and cement of society. Locke.
2. Association; confederacy; combination.
We would not die in that man's company,
That fears his fellowship to die with us. Shakesp. Henry V.
Those laws do bind men absolutely, even as they are men, although they have never any settled fellowship, never any solemn agreement amongst themselves what to do, or not to do. Hooker, b. i. f. 10.
Most of the other Christian princes were drawn into the fellowship of that war. Knolles's History of the Turks.
3. Equality.
4. Partnership; joint interest.
Nearer acquainted, now I feel by proof
That fellowship in pain divides not smart,
Nor lightens aught each man's peculiar load. Parad. Reg.
O love! thou sternly do'st thy pow'r maintain,
And wilt not bear a rival in thy reign;
Tyrants and thou all fellowship disdain. Dryden.
5. Company; state of being together.
The great contention of the sea and skies Parted our fellowship. But hark, a fail! Shakesp. Othello.
6. Frequency of intercourse; social pleasure.
In a great town friends are scattered, so that there is not that fellowship which is in less neighbourhoods. Bacon's Essays.

FEM

7. Fitness and fondness for feistal entertainments, with good prefixed.
He had by his excessive good fellowship, which was grateful to all the company, made himself popular with all the officers of the army. Clarendon, b. viii.
8. An establishment in the college with share in its revenue.
Corusodes having, by the most extreme parsimony, saved thirty-four pounds out of a beggarly fellowship, went up to London. Swift.
9. [In arithmetic.] That rule of plural proportion whereby we balance accounts, depending between divers persons, having put together a general stock, so that they may every man have his proportional gain, or sustain his proportional part of loss. Cocher's Arithmetick.
10. A rule in arithmetic, by which two or more independent operations of the rule of three may divide any given number into unequal parts, proportional to certain other numbers.
It is so called, because the more common and useful application thereof is in the division of gains, losses, or other things, among partners in company. Malcolm.
FELLY. adv. [from fell.] Cruelly; inhumanly; savagely;
barbarously.
Fair ye be sure, but cruel and unkind;
As is a tiger, that with greediness
Hunts after blood, when he by chance doth find
A feeble beast, doth felly him oppress. Spenser's Sonnets.
FELON-DE-SE. n. f. [In law.] He that committeth felony by murdering himself.
FELON. n. f. [felon, French; felus, low Latin; fel, Saxon.]
1. One who has committed a capital crime.
I apprehend thee for a felon here. Shak. Romeo and Juliet.
And often have you brought the wily fox,
Chas'd even amid the folds; and made to bleed,
Like felons, where they did the murderous deed. Dryden.
2. A whitlow; a tumour formed between the bone and its investing membrane, very painful.
The malign paronychia is that which is commonly called a felon. Wifeman's Surgery.
FELON. adj. Cruel; traitorous; inhuman.
Ay me! what thing on earth, that all things breeds,
Might be the cause of so impatient plight!
What fury, or what fiend with felon deeds,
Hath stirr'd up so mischievous despite! Spenser.
Then bids prepare th' hospitable treat,
Vain shews of love to veil his felon hate. Pope's Odyssey.
FELONIOUS. adj. [from felon.] Wicked; traitorous; villa-nous; malignant; perfidious; destructive.
This man conceived the duke's death; but what was the motive of that felonious conception is in the clouds. Watson.
O thiefish night!
Why should'st thou, but for some felonious end,
In thy dark lantern thus close up the stars
That nature hung in heav'n, and fill'd the lamps
With everlasting oil, to give due light
To the mistle and lonely traveller? Milton.
In thy felonious heart though venom lies,
It does but touch thy Irish pen and dies. Dryden.
FELONIOUSLY. adv. [from felonious.] In a felonious way.
FELONOUS. adj. [from felon.] Wicked; felonious.
I am like for desperate dole to die,
Through felonous force of mine enemy. Spenser's Pastoral.
FELONY. n. f. [felonie, Fr. felonia, low Latin, from felon.] A crime denounced capital by the law; an enormous crime.
I will make it felony to drink small beer. Shakesp. Henry VI.
FELT. The preterite of FEEL, which see.
FELT. n. f. [felt, Saxon.]
1. Cloth made of wool united without weaving.
It were a delicate stratagem to those
A troop of horse with felt. Shakespeare's King Lear.
2. A hide or skin.
To know whether sheep are found or not, see that the felt be loose. Mortimer's Husbandry.
TO FELT. v. a. [from the noun.] To unite without weaving.
The same wool one man felts into a hat, another weaves it into cloth, another into kersey. Hale's Origin of Mankind.
TO FELTRE. v. a. [from felt.] To clot together like felt.
His feltred locks, that on his bosom fell,
On rugged mountains briars and thorns resemble. Fairfax.
FELUCCA. n. f. [felu, Fr. felon, Arab.] A small open boat with six oars. Dia.
FEMALE. n. f. [from femelle, French; femella, Latin.] A she;
one of the sex which brings young.
God created man in his own image, male and female created he them. Gen. i. 27.
Man, more divine,
Lord of the wide world, and wide wat'ry seas,
Indu'd with intellectual sense and soul,
Are matters to their females, and their lords. Shakespeare.
FEMALE. adj.
1. Not masculine; belonging to a she.
If by a female hand he had foreseen
He was to die, his wish had rather been
The lance and double ax of the fair warrior queen. Dryd.
2. FEMALE

FEN

2. FEMALE Rhymes. Double rhymes so called, because in French, from which the term is taken, they end in a weak or feminine. These rhymes are female:
Th' excess of heat is but a fable;
We know the torrid zone is now found habitable. Cowley.
The female rhymes are in use with the Italian in every line, with the Spaniard promiscuously, and with the French alternately, as appears from the Alarique, the Pucelle, or any of their later poems. Dryden's Preface to Ann. Mirab.
FEME COVERT. n. f. [French.] A married woman; who is also said to be under covert baron. Blount.
FEME Sola. n. f. [French.] A single woman; an unmarried woman.
FEMINAILTY. n. f. [from femina, Latin.] Female nature.
If in the minority of natural vigour the parts of femininity take place, upon the increase or growth thereof the masculine appears. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 17.
FEMININE. adj. [femininus, Latin.]
1. Of the sex that brings young; female.
Thus we chastise the god of wine
With water that is feminine,
Until the cooler nymph abate
His wrath, and so congregate. Cleaveland.
2. Soft; tender; delicate.
Her heav'nly form
Angelick, but more soft and feminine. Milton's Parad. Lost.
3. Effeminate; emasculated.
Ninias was no man of war at all, but altogether feminine and subjected to ease and delicacy. Raleigh's Hist. of the World.
FEMININE. n. f. A she; one of the sex that brings young;
a female.
O! why did God create at last
This novelty on earth, this fair defect
Of nature? And not fill the world at once With men, as angels, without feminine? Milt. Par. Lost.
FEMORAL. adj. [femoralis, Latin.] Belonging to the thigh.
The largest crooked needle should be used in taking up the femoral arteries in amputation. Sharp's Surgery.
FEN. n. f. [penn, Saxon; venne, Dutch.] A marsh; low flat and moist ground; a moor; a bog.
Mexico is a city that stands in the midst of a great marsh or fen. Abbot's Description of the World.
I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen
Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen. Shakesp. Coriolan.
Yon common cry of curs, whose breath I hate,
As reek o' th' rotten fen. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
The surface is of black fen earth. Woodward on Fossils.
He to Portina's wat'ry marshes went;
A long canal the muddy fen divides,
And with a clear unfil'd current glides. Addison.
FENBERRY. n. f. [fen and berry.] A kind of blackberry. Skinner.
FENCER. n. f. [from defence.]
1. Guard; security; outwork; defence.
That proved not fence enough to the reputation of their oppressors. Decay of Piety.
There's no fence against inundations, earthquakes, or hurricanes. L'Estrange, Fable 167.
To put them out of their parents view, at a great distance, is to expose them to the greatest dangers of their whole life, when they have the least fence and guard against them. Locke.
Let us bear this awful corps to Cæsar,
And lay it in his sight, that it may stand
A fence betwixt us and the victor's wrath. Addison's Cato.
2. Inclosure; mound; hedge.
In vain did nature's wife command
Divide the waters from the land,
If daring ships, and men prophane,
Invade th' inviolable main;
Th' eternal fences overleap,
And pass at will the boundless deep. Dryden's Horace.
Shall I mention make
Of the vast mound that binds the Lucrine lake?
Or the disdainful sea, that, shut from thence,
Roars round the structure, and invades the fence? Dryden.
Employ their wiles and unavailing care,
To pass the fences and surprise the fair. Pope.
3. The art of fencing; defence.
I bruised my skin th' other day, with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence. Shakesp. Merry Wives of Windsor.
4. Skill in defence.
I'll prove it on his body, if he dare,
Despite his nice fence and his active practice. Shakespeare.
TO FENCE. v. a.
1. To inclose; to secure by an inclosure or hedge.
Th' inhabitants each pasture and each plain Destroyed have, each field to waste is laid;
In fenced towers bestow'd is their grain,
Before thou cam'st this kingdom to invade. Fairfax, b. ii.
He hath fenced up my way that I cannot pass, and set darkness in my paths. Job xix. 8.

FEN

Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and hast fenced me with bones and sinews. Job x. 11.
He went about to make a bridge to a strong city, which was fenced about with walls. 2 Mac. xii. 13.
See that the churchyard be fenced in with a decent rail, of other inclosure. Ayliffe's Parergon.
2. To guard.
So much of adders wisdom I have learnt,
To fence my ear against thy forceries. Milton's Agonistes.
With love to friend, th' impatient lover went,
Fenc'd from the thorns, and trod the deep descent. Dryden.
TO FENCE. v. n.
1. To practise the arts of manual defence; to practise the use of weapons.
He having got some iron, should have it beaten into swords, and put into his servants hands to fence with, and bang one another. Locke.
2. To guard against; to act on the defensive.
Vice is the more stubborn as well as the more dangerous evil, and therefore in the first place to be fenced against. Locke.
3. To fight according to art.
If a thistle sing, he falls strait a capering;
He will fence with his own shadow. Shak. Merch. of Venice.
A beauteous heifer in the wood is bred;
The flooping warriors, aiming head to head,
Engage their clashing horns; with dreadful sound
The forest rattles, and the rocks rebound;
They fence and push, and, pushing, loudly roar,
Their dewlaps and their sides are bath'd in gore. Dryden.
A man that cannot fence will keep out of bullies and gamesters company. Locke.
These, being polemical arts, could no more be learned alone than fencing or cudgelling. Arbutn. and Pope's Ma. Sc.
FENCELESS. adj. [from fence.] Without inclosure; open.
Each motion of the heart rises to fury,
And love in their weak bosoms is a rage
As terrible as hate, and as destructive:
So the wind roars o'er the wide fenceless ocean,
And heaves the billows of the boiling deep,
Alike from North, from South, from East, from West. Rowe's Jane Shore.
FENCER. n. f. [from fence.] One who teaches or practises the use of weapons, or science of defence.
Calmness is great advantage: he that lets Another chafe, may warm him at his fire,
Mark all his wand'rings, and enjoy his frets;
As cunning fencers suffer heat to tire. Herbert.
A nimble fencer will put in a thrust so quick, that the foil will be in your bosom when you thought it a yard off. Digby.
FENCIBLE. adj. [from fence.] Capable of defence. Addison.
FENCINGMASTER. n. f. [fence and master.] One who teaches the use of weapons.
FENCINGSCHOOL. n. f. [fence and school.] A place in which the use of weapons is taught.
If a man be to prepare his son for duels, I had rather mine should be a good wrestler than an ordinary fencer, which is the most a gentleman can attain to, unless he will be constantly in the fencingschool, and every day exercising. Locke.
TO FEND. v. a. [from defend.] To keep off; to shut out.
Spread with straw the bedding of thy fold,
With fern beneath, to fend the bitter cold. Dryden's Virgil.
TO FEND. v. n. To dispute; to shift off a charge.
The dexterous management of terms, and being able to fend and prove with them, passes for a great part of learning;
but it is learning distinct from knowledge. Locke.
FENDER. n. f. [from fend.]
1. An iron plate laid before the fire to hinder coals that fall from rolling forward to the floor.
2. Any thing laid or hung at the side of a ship to keep off violence.
FENERATION. n. f. [feneratio, Latin.] Usury; the gain of interest; the practice of increasing money by lending.
The hare figured not only pusillanimity and timidity from its temper, but feneration and usury from its fecundity and superfétation. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 17.
FENUGREEK. n. f. [fenum Græcum, Latin.] A plant.
It hath a papilionaceous flower, out of whose empalement rises the pointal, which afterwards becomes a pod, somewhat plain, shaped like a horn, and full of seeds, for the most part rhomboid or kidney-shaped. Miller.
FENNEL. n. f. [feniculum, Latin.] A plant of strong scent.
It is an umbelliferous plant, whose leaves are divided into capillaceous jags: the petals of the flower are intire, and placed orbicularly, expanding in form of a rose; each flower is succeeded by two oblong thick gibbous seeds, chauced on one side, and plain on the other. Miller.
A fav'ry odour blown, more pleas'd my sense
Than smell of sweetest fennel, or the teats
Of ewe, or goat, dropping with milk at ev'n. Milton.
FENNELFLOWER. n. f. A plant.
FENNELGIANT. n. f. A plant.
